Meet Holy Week Again for the First Time

Holy Week is more than a remembrance of sacred events; it is a living pathway into peace. Metaphysically, each movement of the week traces the soul's quiet return—from the noise of the outer self to the stillness of the indwelling Christ. What appears, on the surface, as suffering is in truth a sacred clearing—an invitation to release all that disturbs our inner peace: fear, resistance, and the identities we have outgrown.

Passion (Palm) Sunday marks the threshold of this journey. Here, "passion" is not simply about pain, but about enduring with purpose. It is the willingness to stay present as peace calls us deeper. As Jack Kornfield reminds us, "Spiritual growth involves giving up the images of ourselves that no longer serve us." This letting go is not loss—it is the first opening through which peace begins to enter.

As the week unfolds, we are invited into a different kind of strength—not the brittle strength of control, but the gentle strength of surrender. Richard Rohr speaks of transforming suffering into love, and in doing so, we soften what once hardened us. Eckhart Tolle reminds us that when we yield to the deeper current of life, we align with something far greater than struggle.

Holy Week, then, is a journey into peace—not by escaping life, but by moving through it with awareness and trust. In the words of Charles Fillmore, "Renunciation is the power to let go." And in that sacred release, we discover that peace was never absent—only waiting to be revealed.

A Sacred Exchange – The Circle of Generosity

Sharing of tithes and love offerings with Unity is a spiritual practice of acknowledging the flow of blessings that comes with conscious giving and receiving. This is a personal, sacred activity in which each person participates in their own way.

This is not a debt we owe, but a seed we sow from a consciousness of abundance.

You are encouraged to enter a prayerful mindset and heart-set of gratitude as a spiritual practice.
